VEGETABLE GARDENING.

Many vegetable gardens have been damaged by the heavy rains and must be replanted. If you still be interested in having a copy of the new bulletin on vegetable gardening available at your county extension agent's office.

A map of Texas divides the State into three areas, so no matter where you live, you can decide which varieties are best for your locality. A complete planting guide is included in the bulletin.

There are exciting new varieties of vegetables recommended along with some of the all-time favorites. If you haven't planted the salad bowl lettuce you are in store for a pleasant and delightful surprise. Then, there are the heavy producers of beans like Top Crop and Tendergreen.

If you're bothered with insects and diseases in the garden, some helpful ideas for their control are given in the bulletin. It's a complete planting and growing guide. Just ask for the bulletin on vegetable gardening.

Collin Farmers Praise Stubble Mulching

Three Collin County farmers point out the value of stubble mulching in the June issue of The Progressive Farmer magazine. The article, "Don't Burn Your Straw —Use It!" points out that straw helps boost yields, helps soil soak up water, cut soil erosion, cuts water evaporation, and makes land easier to plow.

John Wells, chairman of Collin County Soil Conservation District, pointed out that wheat on thin soil produced good on his farm last year in spite of drouth. Humus built into the soil by the stubble that was mulched on the soil, helped it catch and hold all of the rain that fell.

Tobe Carrell, who farms near Frisco, says: "Leaving grain stubble on the soil is the best way I know to prevent soil erosion. Stubble and straw that I've left on the soil has improved tilth of the soil." Carrell also plants a legume cover crop in the stubble.

Bill Donihoo, who farms east of Plano, uses grain stubble in combination with summer peas for soil conditioning. He uses a one-way plow to chop the straw, then follows it with a chisel plow to mix the straw in the top few inches or leave it on top.

John G. 'Doc' Hagan, Jr., SCS technician at Plano, says: "Cover, regardless of whether it is a growing crop or a mulch of a past crop, is needed on soil to protect it against damaging effects of beating rain and hot sun."

FLOOD PREVENTION DAM ON HONEY CREEK

Courtsey Dallas Morning News

Fred Pass, Farm Editor of the Dallas News, wrote the following article which appeared in the News This week, using as the caption "Tame As a Kitten — Flood Held Back on Honey Creek."

A flood was hemmed up in the hills north of McKinney last week.

Unlike the floods that have swept down numerous Texas river and creek valleys lately, destroying crops and livestock, this flood was as tame as a kitten as it waited to be turned loose.

This was the flood of Honey Creek, a tributary of the East Fork of the Trinity River. It didn't do a dime's worth of damage to the rich bottom lands, because it was held behind 14 flood prevention dams of the Soil Conservation Service.

Instead of sweeping across the creek bottom in a few hours' time carrying cattle and crops and road bridges and even human lives with it, this floodwater will flow in an ordinarily manner over the next two or three weeks from th 14 reservoirs to Lake Lavon.

This was the first real test of the flood-checking abilities of the SCS dams on Honey Creek. There are 16 planned for the creek, and 71 for the whole system of controlling the East Fork of the Trinity. Two of the Honey Creek dams haven't yet been built.

Soil Consrvation Service's area director in Denton, George Wood, and SCS technician Bud Norton of McKinney said the Honey Creek dams held back 50 per cent of the water from a 32,000-acre drainage area. When the other two dams are completed, the group can hold 65 per cent of the water.

Putting it simply Wood said five billion gallons of water were held in check back in the hills last week — water that otherwise would have flooded 2,000 acres of rich Honey Creek bottomland. The East Fork System will protect 14,600 acres of bottomland — some of the best farm land in this part of Texas.

"We have heard criticism of these dams from city folks," said Wood. "They think we've built these dams to hold water that they need in the big lakes.

"We want them to understand that we don't keep this water. It flows on to Lavon Lake just like it would, except it flows over a period, of several weeks under control, instead of in a few hours all over the creek bottom."

In addition to saving the bottomlans and all that's in them, the dams keep the big city lakes from silting up, Norton explained. Below the outflow line of each reservoir is a silt pool big enough to store no more than 200 acre-feet of water. The silt settles here, and clean water flows through the outlet pipe on its way to Lavon.

The reserviors are designed to be effective for 50 years, Norton said.

Between now and 50 years hence —when the pool is expected to be full of silt — the farmer who owns the land has the right to use the water in the pool for watering stock, irrigation or recreation.

The dams cost an average of $35,000 apiece. They must be designed to save $1 worth of flood damage for every $1 spent, and most of Honey Creek dams will save about $2 for $1 according to economists who studied the system.

Last week alone about $100,000 in flood damage was saved by dams, SCS men figured. This doesn't count the lives that might have been saved or the soil that wasn't hurt from erosion.

The Honey Creek system was only one of a number of systems that was functioning during the rains, said Paul Walser, acting state conservationist at Temple.

Escondido Creek in the Kenedy area received up to 4 inches of rain. Ten of 11 planned structures have been completed on the watershed. If the dams had not been there, 1,500 acres of floodplain land would have flooded, damageing about $30,000 worth of growing crops.

Nearby on Hondo Creek, which has no such flood protection, floods did about $35,000 damage to crops, roads and bridges.

In all, said Walser, 173 floodwater retarding dams in Texas are now holding about 170,000 acre-feet of water and feeding it slowly into stream channels.

Demonstrations To Feature "Armed Forces Day" May 19

Flight demonstrations, arrested landings, fire fighting exercises, and a massed flyover of Navy Cougar jets will spice the Armed Forces Day "open house" to be held at the Dallas Naval Air Station from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. on Sunday, May 19, 1957.

The public is invited to attend and ample parking space will be available near the flight events, which will commence at 2:00 p.m.

Aircraft of all types assigned to the air station will be on static display. Visitors will have an opportunity to view at close range the Regulus I fleet type guided missile. Also on display will be the world's fastest Navy day-fighter, the Crusader, which holds a world speed record of 1015 mph. Another Texas product, the Tempco TT-1- primary jet trainer, is expected to be available for inspection.

In addition to the demonstrations, the "Week-end Warriors" will carry out their many and varied flight training activties on the field, thus affording the public an opportunity to see their Naval Air Reserve in action. Field training activties will be maxmized.

An unusual feature of the flight demonstrations will be a simulated "flameout" landing by a Navy jet.

Armed Forces Day is observed throughout the nation annually on the third week-end in May so that the civilian population may become better acquainted with the state of readiness and efficiency of the agencies of national defense.

TOM and PETE — THE HOME TOWNERS

"THE GREEN LIGHTS ARE ON" IN McKINNEY AND COLLIN COUNTY

YOUR HOME Towners can't confirm the newest "fish story" but seems that someone on West Tucker Street caught a fish so big that when a picture was taken of it, the picture weighed over four pounds itself. Couldn't have been the Mayor of Tucker Street, George Moore—could be.

WE HAVE been advised by friends of "Happy" Hendricks that he is having a little trouble. Seems that Your Home Towners friend, "Happy," was getting his bathing suit out, getting ready for the summer swim and after inspecting his bathing suit he found that he had a hole in both knees. Guess it was made of faulty material, "Happy" advised us. Anyone knowing the whereabouts of a good used bathing suit, full length with both knees intact contact Brother "Happy" or if you can't find him, see Vernon Walker, Mr. Amlico himself.

YOUR HOME Towners personal little friends, Mike, Matthew, and Dick Abernathy, manly little sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jewell Abernathy, 408 North Morris, Telephone LI 2-5485, have a little problem — Kittens — their main concern at this writing. Seems that two sets of Kittens were born and now they need a nice comfortable home for them. Anyone wanting a little Kitten, Call the Abernathy boys and Pappa Abernathy will deliver them personally.

COMMITTEE OF 20

FORT WORTH'S new mayor, Tom McCann, has come forward with a program for city progress which calls for a "Committee of Twenty" business and civil leaders to advise the City Council.

It sounds like an idea which could bear fruit in improving municipal government and bring it closer to the people of Fort Worth.

There have been instances in past years when the decisions of councilmen have been predicated on poor information, or made entirely in the absence of facts which were easily available.

In the Committee of Twenty we see the opportunity for broadening the base of the city government without taking from City Council the right and responsibility for final decision which councilmen legally hold.

Wise counsel is a rare commodity. There is a reservoir of it in the minds of Fort Worthers. We hope the City Council will choose to draw on this reservoir, as the mayor suggests, for the progress of our city.

This means using the committee if it is created.

Not a bad idea for Big McK, Mayor Smith.

Some Modification In Electric Rates Awaits Approval

Several modifications in its present rate schedules, which will result in minor decerases in the cost of electric service to a limlited number of customers were filed by Texas Power & Light Company with the City Commission at its meeting this week.

Subject to approval by the City Commission, the modified schedules will become effective on bills rendered on or after May 16 stated Boyd Williams, TP&L manager.

"Principally, the revisions will affect the manner in which churches with air conditioning installations are billed for power service," Mrs. Williams said. "The revisions will also provide slight reductions for a small number of residential customers, principally those using single phase central air conditioning systems," Mr. Williams pointed out.

Another revision filed by the Company will increase the amount of credit that large power customers will receive when they provide their own transformers.

"These rate modifications," Mr. Williams said, "are made in line with the Company's policy of keeping its rates as equitable and as nearly in line with the cost of doing business as possible."

Barry Britton, young son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Britton, received a painful cut on his head Tuesday afternoon when he fell off a fence. He is confined to his home on Westway Drive, where he is reported to be doing nicely.

Van Alstyne Cemetery Is A Place Of Historical Interest

Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" might well have been written after a visit to Van Alstyne's cemetery. On a hill at the eastern edge of town the location offers a panorama of rolling hills which suggest the peacefulness of a country churchyard.

Before there was a Van Alstyne, people buried their dead there, and it is one of the oldest landmarks in this section of the country. After the coming of the railroads and the establishment of a town, a little Methodist church was built in its friendly environs. The city grew away from it to the west, and in 1890 the church was moved, but the city of the dead continued to grow.

In 1871, it had become officially "a graveyard" when James Ashley McKinney, member of one of the oldest pioneer families of the state, deeded four acres of land which belonged to him for the purpose.

Quaint and original is the document, now yellowed with age, which marks that transaction. Written on double foolscap paper in a fine spencerian hand, it bears the notice on the outer fold, "J. A. McKinney, deed to H. C., G. Y., D. L. and C. M. McKinney, trustees for four acres of land for a Graveyard, May 24, 1871; S. Bostic, clerk. Record May 21, 1871. Book 5, pages 570 Grayson County Records."

The deed itself states that the writer, "out of consideration and respect for the mortal remains of the dead and of those who now live, but by providence must soon die, gave, granted and conveyed the land," and his thoughtfulness is further remarked in that a certain portion is designated for the negroes. Among those named for trusteeship, which honor was to pass to their oldest sons and to their grandsons, idefinitely, none of the original number remain. The dead is in the possession of the City of Van Alstyne.

The cemetery is interesting for itself alone in that it is the place of interment for many of those illustrous ones connected with the early life of Texas. Near its center, marked by a high shaft, is the resting place of Collin McKinney, a signer of Texas Declaration of Independence. This is the high spot of the cemetery. Many visit the spot for the privilege of reading the now all but obliterated inscription which reads, "He was one of natures noblemen; an ardent patriot and a true Christian." The date of birth is given, April 17, 1776, his death, September 9, 1861. By his side rests his wife, Betsy E., born March 2, 1786, died August 2, 1862.

Simple, unaffected sincere as his life must have been, is the stone which makes no record of his achievements. Near him are buried kinsmen, Polly and J. McKinney, and other old family names noticed in the same section are Milam, Steele, Kelly, Greer, Tyree, Sunderland, Hayhurst, Sharley, and many others.

No marked graves are dated earlier than 1860 and more none were found with earlier birthdate than Collin McKinney, born in 1776. Many graves are there which mark the turn of the century. One notices the quaint, often trite inscriptions such as "Gone but not forgotten." "Parted on earth to meet in Heaven." "Earth has one pure spirit less; Heaven one imortal more."

There are many gravestones which vary in size and styling. The earliest seem to be mostly simple slabs covered in moss. The effect of the Victorian nineties is noticed in more ornate sculpture, such as lambs, cherubs, clasped hands, does, while dotted here and there are tall shafts and the insignia of benevolent associations and lodges.

Among the more pretentious monuments to the soldier dead is one of James LaFayette Greer, who, his inscription states, was one of the army of Northern Virginia, C. S. A. Doles-Cook Brigade; 4th Ga. Reg. Co. D., and the record adds "One of the immortal 600." And there is a modern stone of Texas granite marking the resting place of Lieut. Hobert E. Burk, Headquarters company 105, Inf. 27 Div. A. A. E. F., whose inscription reads, "Killed leading his men in the Battle of the Knoll Bony, France," and the records add in his case, "The engagement which first smashed the Hindenburg line."

Only two amount the any. There are others among the soldier dead —there are those who fought with the Blue and those who fought with the Gray, others who fought in the Spanish-American conflict.

"It has been factiously remarked that anyone who ever lived in Van Alstyne comes back here to be buried. The fact remains that Van Alstyne has one of the best kept cemeteries and one of the most interesting in a historical way to be found in North Texas.

The dead number more than those now living in Van Alstyne. The cemetery has grown from four acres in 1860 to forty acres today. This cemetery is community owned and a non-profit, nonsalaried organization operated by a Board of Directors appointed annually by the City Commission of Van Alstyne. It is maintained solely by contributions. Sunday, May 12th, Mother's Day, is Decoration Day for this cemetery.

Methodists Of Collin County Hold Rally In McKinney

Methodist preachers and laymen, their wives and children, from all parts of Collin County gathered last Sunday at First Methodist Church of this city for a rally marking the close of two years of active support of their Collin County Group Ministry program, a plan in which key churches of the county try to reach out and help the smaller units in the rural areas. The Sunday afternoon session was opened with old fashioned gospel singing led by Hansel McCord, widely known musician from Oak Lawn Methodist Church, Dallas, accompanied by Sid Howse, organist at the newly organized Oak View Methodist Church of the same city.

Dr. Royal Ramsey, teacher of a widely known Men's Sunday School Class at Sulphur Springs, brought an inspirational message, "Methodism on the March," after which discussion groups were formed for a half-hour session.

The Youth Group was led by Rev. Edgar Huffstutler of Plano; the Women's group was headed by Mrs. Forest Wood, of McKinney, and Mrs. Ray Haggard, of Plano, while Rev. O. B. Rogers, executive secretary of the North Texas Conference Group Ministry Program, took charge of the Men's group, leading up to brief remarks by District Superintendent Philip W. Walker, whose leadership in the McKinney-Sherman District has been particularly energetic in channeling efforts of laymen toward winning people to Christ and the Church.

Photographs of the group were taken at the 5:30 p.m. recess period, and a covered dish supper was enjoyed by some two hundred people in the Fellowship Hall of the church at six o'clock.

Evening services were highlighted again by the fine singing under Mr McCord, miscellaneous reports were heard, and Louis V. Chandler, president of the County-wide Group, introduced Dr. Tom Shipp, pastor of Lover's Lane Methodist Church of Dallas, who spoke on the subject "Church and The Home."

Rev. H. C. Hoy, pastor of First Church, McKinney, welcomed visitors from other churches in the county, including Rev. Lindley Vowell of Frisco, Rev. Edgar Huffstutler of Plano, Rev. Roy Patton of Wylie, Rev. Spiva of Nevada-Josephine, Rev. Grady May of Farmersville, Rev. David Brantley of Blue Ridge and Pleasant Grove, Rev. N. L. Glasco of Celina, Rev. Hlad of Princeton, Rev. Bill Wier of Allen, Rev. Sam Smith of Prosper and Rev. Robert Langley of Weston-Chambersville Cottage Hill charge.

District officials here for the occasion included Dr. and Mrs. Philip W. Walter of Sherman, and Jack V. Folsom of Dallas, the latter being North Texas Conference Lay Leader. Mr. Folsom's assistant was present also, Truett Smith of Wylie. Mr. Smith served the county and district as Lay Leader for several years before being given the associate for the conference. Rev. H. C. Hoy, the host pastor, also serves as District Director of the Town and Country Commission.

Churches represented at the meeting were Farmersville, Henslee Chapel, Copeville, Nevada, Josephine, Wylie, Plano, Blythe's Chapel, Frisco, Prosper, Chamville, Weston, Cottage Hill, Melissa, Blue Ridge, Princeton, and Allen. Wesley Memorial of McKinney was represented by a delegation headed by the pastor, Rev. J. B. Hibbert.

The meeting came to a close with an invitation from First Methodist Church of Sherman to all the laymen from this district to be present at a District wide Laymen's Rally to be held there on the evening of May 14th. Rev. Rogers asked Collin County laymen to send a delegation of one hundred men from this county to represent them.

Mrs. Minnie Coleman had as her weekend guests Mrs. Babe Culbertson of Fort Worth, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Coleman of Plano and Mrs. Giddings of Allen.

Jack Bolton Praises Personnel Of VA Hospital Here

The following letter from Jack Bolton of this city, is written in praise of McKinney's Veterans Administration Hospital and the wonderful personnel that staff the instiution.

"I would like to take this opportunity to try to express in my inadequate way my deep appreciation for the wonderful care I was given at the VA during my recent illness.

"Drs. Quattlebaum and Chapman went far beyond their necessary requirements in the operation and follow up. They seemed to take a special interest in my welfare as well as in all of the other patients who come under their care. They are really dedicated men.

"That same spirit seems to prevail in all of the other employes of the VA. The nurses, God Bless them, are really angels of mercy. They seemed so willing and anxious to do everything in their power to help alleviate the pain and suffering of all the patients under their care.

"The Ward Attendants! I just can't say enough for them—always ready, day and night to go far beyond the call of duty to do what was needed and much more.

"One boy in particular, who had just undergone an extremely painful operation himself noticed another patient was having trouble at the time the nurse and ward attendant on duty were very busy with another patient. He got up from his own bed of pain and ran down the ward to help the fellow in trouble. What a man! I think his name is O'Shields.

"To me all the employes, especially those on duty in Ward 107, are truly not just employes but real dedicated people, and I am forever grateful for what they did for me.

Former Frisco Boy Drowned At Lake Dallas

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Mays and Mrs. Henry Francis, all of Frisco, recently visited Rev. and Mrs. McSpedden and family near Denton. Last Saturday Douglas McSpedden, youngest son of Rev. and Mrs. McSpedden, was drowned at Lake Dallas, which news was received with much sadness in the Frisco community where the family resided for several years.

Rev. McSpedden was former pastor of the Baptist Church at Frisco.

Red Cross On Job Again As Floods Hit

Storm weary Red Cross chapter people and National Disaster Staff in North East, Central and West Texas had another active week-end Shelters were re-openend in Abilene and Dallas as new floods hit the cities causing evacuation of hundreds of people. Dallas County Chapter fed 85 people in their shelter at Fair Park Monday at noon with prospects for a larger number to feed Tuesday.

Ozona and Sonora had about 85 families evacuated because of high waters caused by flash floods. Chapters in Del Rio and Eagle Pass, San Angelo and Brady are standing by for possible evacuations.

Lampasas was delt the heaviest blow of the lot. The Lampasas Red Cross established a shelter in the First Baptist Church where about 500 people were cared for by chapter personnel and volunteers. Food and clothing had been brought in from the outside because all merchandise was damaged by flood waters. The Red Cross Mobile Canteen, donated by the CIO-AFL, with volunteers arrived in Lampasas Sunday night from Fort Worth. A Red Cross disaster team from Gatesville assisted the local Lampasas chapter all during the night. A. G. Scofield of the McLennan County Chapter brought in fresh milk and formulas for the babies early Monday morning. Red Cross sent into Lampasas 250 cots and 500 blankets to help take care of the homeless. Bell County Red Cross rushed in dry clothes during Sunday night. Operations were most difficult because of al lstores being destroyed in Lampasas and the town was cut off for many hours by the high water.

There has been a splendid response from all the Lampasas neighbors. Mrs. Baird's Bakeries have donated two truck loads of bread to the American Red Cross to use in mass feeding operation. Superior Dairies, Austin, Texas, has dispatched 2 refrigerated trucks to be used by the Red Cross in preservation of food at feeding stations.

Trained disaster staff from the national organization are on the scene to aid Lampasas and adjoining chapters in the operation.

"Country" Party Honors Graduates

The women of the First Presbyterian Church turned back the clock last Friday night and honored George Comegys, Elliott Knott and Reed West with an old-fashioned "country" party.

The kitchen was lighted by oil lamps and candles and was beautifully decorated with honeysuckle, blue iris and cornflowers. The sink was especially lovely, being completely disguiised with a profusion of these flowers.

The serving tables in the kitchen were covered with blue denim cloths and held baskets of buns, potato chips and cake, with drinks in a huge copper kettle. The stove, with its honeysuckle-filled tea kettle, held a black iron pot filled with chili and the hot dogs.

The food was served by the men in white chef's hats, and the ladies in calico and aprons.

The center of interest in the dining room was a huge hot dog, complete with its three-foot-long bun. This room was lighted by hurricane lamps and candles and was decorated honeysuckle and greenery in brass containers.

After supper the guests played ping-pong and darts, while many joined in the square dancing in the annex.
